

CPSC Letter of Exemption

Applicability of the Consumer Product Safety Improvement Act of 2008 (CPSIA) for P&G Products

Product safety and regulatory compliance are top priorities at P&G. Under the Consumer Product Safety Improvement Act of 2008 (CPSIA), manufacturers, importers, and private labelers must certify that their products that are sold in the U.S. and that are covered by one or more specific rules, regulations, standards, or bans enforced by the Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) comply with those rules, regulations, standards, or bans. With limited exceptions for new rules applicable to products for use by children, the CPSIA does not change which products are subject to rules enforced by the CPSC. We have evaluated all P&G products sold in the U.S. and believe the following types of P&G products are not subject to CPSIA certification requirements:

- Paper products such as paper towels and facial and toilet tissue
- Infant wipes
- Feminine hygiene products
- Toothbrushes, floss, and other dental care devices for adults and children
- Cosmetics and toiletries for adults
- Nonprescription drugs for adults not requiring child-resistant packaging
- General household care products that do not require labeling under CPSC-enforced rules (including batteries, flashlights, and electrical devices)
- General household care and cleaning products that are subject only to the cautionary labeling requirements of the Federal Hazardous Substances Act
- Adult blades and razors
- Antimicrobial and antibacterial household care products
- Foods
- Pet foods
- Products intended only for industrial and institutional use (including use in medical offices)

All P&G products requiring certification will have a notice accompanying each shipping container that explains how the full certifications can be found on the website: www.pg.com/cpsc. If any product within these types for any reason requires a certification, a notice will accompany each shipment and the certification can be found on the website
